OPPRESSION and extortion by officials are so prevalent throughout the Empire of China that it is always refreshing to hear of an exception to this too-general rule. It is rarely indeed that Chinese officials set themselves per. carnestly to the work of correcting abuses and redressing grievances. When, thereis discovered be is certainly deserving both of notice and approval. It is with satisfaction that we learn, through a correspondent of the Celestial Empire at Moukden, that the his rule by a series of vigorous measures against the birds of prey of all degree in that robber-ridden province. Bribes can no longer purchase liberty or life; justice moves so swiftly and surely upon the robbers that there is every prospect of their system being speedily extinguished. A magistrate guilty of leniency towards them renders himself Hongkong for sometime. hable to punishment; one official at Chinshow has lost his head for accepting a bribe from robbers and releasing them. Another is in prison simply for not having shown sufficient severity towards these desperadoes. Eurther than this; this energetic Governor, acting on the principle that " prevention is better than ours" has not hesitated to put to death a noted gambler in Moukden, because "men become robbers only when by gambling they have lost everything." professional gamblers have, in consequence, fled from the city, and gambling is now practically unknown there.

We read that a few nights ago a band of discoits entered the house of a jemadar at Shaumepett, some five miles from Tripingherry, and succeeded in entrying off valuables to the amount of some six thousand rupees. If a European in this country had that amount in money and jewels about his house, he would feel thoroughly uncomfortable until the tempting prize was removed to a place of safety. But it is far different with the natives of India, and their manner of storing and hiding their riches is so curious as to deserve a passing notice. A poor man by hard work and frugal and thrifty babits saves gradually a few rupees. These are carefully buried in his but under the place where he sloops, or a brick is removed from the wall and the money scoreted there. The revenue of the State for the preceding yearswas found to be 94 lakes of suppers, and the expenditure no less than 171 lakes. Out of this sum 40 lakes, or nearly half the year's revenue, had been spent in gifts to Mulbar Rac's favourities and courtesans, and 30 lakes more in building, repairing palaces and for purely personal charges. That Sir Lewis Pelly found Re. 2,000 in the Baroda tressury, and 40 lakes concealed in the palace, besides traces of other large sums which had recently been made away with, is already more or less known.—Pioneer. gradually increases. The saving man—wo will imagine him to be some sabib's butler—lends small same of money to his fellow-servants at high rates of interest, and the hoard rapidly swells. He spends a good doal of it in having gold and silver ornaments made for his wife and children. This answers two purposes. It gives his establishment an air of wealth and respectability, and these ornaments are more portable and handy than the somewhat ounbrons silver coinage of these realms. Waxing wealthy in this way, our friend the butler retires from service and takes up his residence in his native village.
